The goal of this bimonthly periodical is to provide a rapid communication channel that will allow clinicians and basic researchers to disseminate information about allergy, asthma, and related disorders. It is aimed at allergists, pneumologists, internists, general practitioners, and all other physicians and investigators interested in the areas of allergy, immunology, and asthma. Articles should help improve standards of practice, and address important problems of our time, such as the impact of a changing environment, the emergence of new diseases specific to the work place, and the increasing role of clinical immunology in medical practice.

Other editions

A Russian edition (ISSN 1863-2408) containing selected articles (4 issues per annual volume) is also available. Prices as for the original English edition.
